

CONTENTS

Special Issue Editors' Introduction

- Seeds of Transformative Change
Steven Hartman and Serpil Oppermann 1

Articles

- Political, Ethical, and Societal Aspects of Issuing Warnings to Humanity
Steven Yearley 19
- “We” May Be in This Together but We Are Not All Human and We Are Not One and the Same
Rosi Braidotti 26
- Speaking for the Earth and Humans in “the Age of Consequences”
Noel Castree 32
- The Language of Warning: The World Scientists' Efforts to Communicate and the Challenge of Poignancy
Scott Slovic 44
- The Sense of Place at the End of the World
Stephanie Foote 52
- Alberta and the Global Commons: A Climate Tragedy
Rob Boschman 59
- Apocalypse Then, Now—and Future?
Bron Taylor 72

Passionate Specificity Ann Fisher-Wirth	85
The Watchman's Part: Earth Time, Human Time and the "World Scientists' Warning to Humanity" Bronislaw Szerszynski	91
At the Bottom of the Barrel: A Response to the Recent World Scientists' Warnings Simon Estok	100
A Sea Change in the Environmental Humanities Cecilia Åsberg	108
Long Live the Climate Machine! Nathalie Blanc	123
Gaia versus the Anthropocene: Untimely Thoughts on the Current Eco-Catastrophe Dorion Sagan	137
Beyond Nonpartisan Discourses: Radical Knowledge for Extreme Times Marco Armiero	147
Book Review
Lewis, Simon L., and Mark A. Maslin. 2018. The Human Planet: How We Created the Anthropocene . London: Pelican. Derek Woods	154